NICK CARR - ARCHITECT

Nick Carr's firm, Intermode, sprang up four years ago to address the need for high-end architect-designed modular homes built in simple but glamorous materials with a straightforward budget – and a short fixed build-time. A recent project, near Melbourne's Dandenong Ranges, took a mere 20 weeks to construct. Materials, including external timber cladding, trusses and windows, arrive on site partially prefabricated, says Nick. "Clients choose designs according to the number of 1.2-metre grid modules they desire," says Nick. This allows them to customise the size of their home, making it easy to control their budget.
